The Asexual Spectrum

Many asexuals identify with two orientations: a romantic and a sexual one. According to the Asexual Visibility and Education Network (AVEN), an asexual’s romantic orientation determines “which gender(s), if any, they are inclined to form romantic relationships with.” There are also individuals in the asexual community who identify in the gray area between asexuality and sexuality.*

ROMANTIC ORIENTATION

- Heteroromantic: A person who is romantically attracted to a member of the opposite sex or gender.

- Homoromantic: A person who is romantically attracted to a member of the same sex or gender.

- Bioromantic: A person who is romantically attracted to two sexes or genders.

- Panromantic: A person who is romantically attracted to others but is not limited by the other’s sex or gender. Similar to bioromantics, panromantics will tend to feel that their partner’s gender does little to define their relationship.

- Aromantic: A person who experiences little or no romantic attraction to others. Where romantic people have an emotional need to be with another person in a romantic relationship, aromantics are often satisfied with friendships and other non-romantic relationships.

SEXUAL ORIENTATION

- Asexual: A person who does not experience sexual attraction.

- Gray-A: A person who identifies in the gray area between asexuality and sexuality. Other terms that have been used for this gray area include “semisexual,” “asexual-ish,” and “sexualish.”

- Demisexual: A person who does not experience sexual attraction unless they form a strong emotional connection with someone. It’s more commonly seen in but is not confined to romantic relationships. Demisexuality differs from Gray-A in that demisexuality is a specific sexual orientation in between “sexual” and “asexual,” whereas “gray-A” is a highly unspecific catch-all used for anything between sexual and asexual that does not fit.

- Sexual: A person who experiences sexual attraction.
